LOCAL MATTERS.

Is it epidemic?
Weather pleasant; town lively;
river rising.

Mrs. Wm. Burke left for Tucson on Friday, to join her husband.

O-strich your imagination, and tell us how to grow oysters on the Gila.

On Friday Mr. Serventi left for his home at Sonoma, Mexico; and Judge A. D. Crawford for Silent.

It will soon be in order to organize a "Can't-get-away Club," as our lovely summer is fast approaching.

Capt. J. L. Smith and Wm. Burke, of Yuma, are registered at the Cosmopolitan hotel, Tucson, last week.

Car-load after car-load of wheat and California wines pass here every day, bound for St. Louis and New Orleans.

Lieut. J. M. E. Hyde, of the Eighth Infantry, now stationed at Fort Lowell, has been promoted to Captain and A. Q. M., U. S. Army.

The Prescott Courier has the grace to send us their daily edition—a quality which is conspicuously wanting in the other dailies of Prescott.

"Count" Hopkins is making an extended visit to Castle Dome mining district. Mr. Hopkins is looking after Mr. Neahr's and his own interests in that section.

Judge H. N. Alexander and family returned from their visit to Tucson and Phoenix, on Sunday morning. On Monday they started on a flying visit to San Francisco.

In the front yard of a house near penitentiary hill, a first-class specimen of the Arizona coyote can be seen. The pet is chained up, and seems to be perfectly satisfied with its present mode of living.

Immigrants are pouring into the Territory both by railroad and private conveyance. Hardly a day passes but there can be seen on our streets "prairie schooners" loaded with that element which soon makes a country wealthy.

George Angelo, the aggressor in that sad tragedy of last week, was a Slavonian by birth, and not a Russian, as was generally believed. He has a daughter living in Panama. George Angelo was an industrious man, but was very ignorant, and had an uncontrollable temper. De mortuis nil nisi bonum.

Visitors to Yuma are very much interested in the pottery made by the Yuma Indians. A few years back the Indians in this vicinity never brought in any earthenware except ollas; now anyone can purchase statuettes, cups, pitchers and "sich like," in any quantity. Their work, though crude, has somewhat of an artistic appearance, and commands a ready sale.

This morning Judge Howard, Col. Brown, Capt. Wilson, Major Wilkins and our reporter were discussing the probabilities of getting a secondary drink at the Sazerac Saloon, two rancheros, or cow boys, or miners, or friends at least met near the old stiffs aforesaid and this was the salutation: "Hullo Bill!" "Hullo yourself." "Don't you know me Bill?" "Well, G-d—a your old soul, is that you Bill?" "Well, by G-d! Let's go and take a drink," and so hand in hand, with the arm of one over the neck of the other and the others arm around his waist the two slid through the folding doors of the Sazerac saloon and were lost to the view of the bystanders.

WHAT JEFF DAVIS DID SAY.

The Correct Report of his Recent Speech in New Orleans.

New Orleans, January 22. —On Saturday night the Benevolent Society of the Army of Northern Virginia held an annual dinner and reunion. Jeff Davis was present and made a short speech. The entire affair had no political significance. Mr. Davis said: "You were not conquered, but overcome by vast odds and superior force. You never hesitated when marched to the assault, but attacked the force in front of you, however great its numbers. Stonewall Jackson did come like an avalanche in the Valley of Virginia, encountering numerous armies greater than his own and sweeping them away in defeat."

That was the history of the army of Northern Virginia. Lee and Jackson, the great chiefs, make a combination which had never been surpassed. With Lee to plan and Jackson to strike, the army had been invincible, and well had Lee said when Jackson fell he had lost his right arm. Jackson had fallen in the hour of victory by the hands of his own friends. He fell only before his conquering troops. You have raised for him a lofty monument, and you have done nobly. Louisiana has a hero, wise in council, glorious in arms. He fell on a victorious battlefield and sleeps in a distant State. To him Louisiana owes a monument. Albert Sidney Johnston, the first commander of the Army of the Tennessee, was one of the heroes of the Confederacy, the peer of chiefs in his own or any day. I knew him, and Lee even at the very beginning of their career in the army. Jackson, I did not know before the war; but when I came to know him I loved and valued him with Lee and Albert Sidney Johnston. I remember Jackson after the battle of M. Ivern Hill, when he galloped up, saying: "The enemy are gone, but let us take the track and follow them." This was his ruling idea, to push an advantage with his wonderful energy and unflinching determination. The first battalion of artillery furnished the Confederacy was from Louisiana. I remember it well, and felt its wonderful valor in Missouri. It is represented here to-night, and I must thank its members for their magnificent service. Brothers, you have endured all the fatigues of many campaigns and the dangers of many battlefields. You remember how, amid the toils and hardships of the trying times a comrade gave you a piece of bread and a draught of water from his canteen. There are no ties like those which grow up under such scenes, and you are indeed brothers. You have written your record; you have done your duty. The principles you then asserted as necessary for the preservation of the American Constitution are now as they were when you struck for them, and the existence of the best Government the world ever saw, the American Union, is still indissolubly bound up in the principles for which you fought. Be still ever ready to fight for the Union, as I would be willing to unsheath my sword for it.

An Obstinate Bride.

The other night a young man from Northern Arkansas and a young woman from the Southern part of the State, met at a hotel in this city and were married. After the ceremony the young man went out and sat in front of the hotel while his wife went up to the room assigned as the bridal chamber.

"This thing of getting married is a lifetime business," he said, addressing a man who had just been divorced from his wife. "I don't know you have found it so," he answered, turning to a single man. "I reckon I'll go up. Wonder if I don't sorter hate to get married, too. But I never was afeared of a man, an' I don't see why I should be afeared of a woman."

He went up and rapped on the door.

"Who's there?" demanded the girl.

"It's me."

"Who's me?"

"Don't you recognize my talk, honey?"

"No, I don't."

"It's your own wide-awake and livin' husband. Let me in."

"Go away from that door; you shan't come in here. I ain't got acquainted with you yet."

"Say, let me in. Them fellers down stairs air laughin' at me. Open the door, fur I'm sleepy," and he yawned like a man waiting for a night train.

"Thought you said you were wide awake?"

"I was a while ago, but I'm powerful sleepy now. Say, ain't you goin' to open this door?"

"No, I ain't."

"Why did you marry me?"

"Cause I wanted to."

"Well, why don't you let me in?"

"Cause I don't want to."

"All right, old gal; I'll shell out fur home and leave you to pay the hotel bill. I never seed the woman that could put the wool over my eyes."

The latch clicked, and the door opened. The hotel bill had frightened her. "It won't do fur a woman to buck agin me, lemmy tell you, fur I was raised at the cross-roads an' went to mill early."—Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette.

If the Stalwarts want to make Blaine President in 1884, they need only keep on in the same line of onslaught as they commenced. The more the people study the South American question, the more do they side with the views of the ex-Secretary.

According to Prof. Proctor, the earth will be a dead world like the moon, just fifteen years from date; for the comet of 1880 will dash into sun in 1897, intensifying the heat of that burning orb to such a degree that all animal and vegetable life here below will be destroyed. His calculations are based on the theory that the orbit of the big comet is swiftly contracting, and unless something happens to make it spin farther off into space it must come in collision with the great luminary in fifteen years. Peace of mind can only be found in the belief that Proctor is a crank.
